Deserting the Ship.

We published a paragraph the other day from the Berlin Correspondent, stating that Hon. Ezra Wheeler, the member of Congress from the 5th district, had renounced McClellan and his works, and was to give his influence and his vote for Lincoln and Johnson. Wheeler was elected two years ago by the democrats over Brown in a district that is really Union, but on account of some local difficulties and lukewarmness existing then, the district was carried against us. Mr. Wheeler's course in Congress was not calculated to make friends with either party, and consequently he was not nominated for re-election by either; but the Chicago inquiry was too much for him and he publicly announced his repudiation of the Chicago ticket. The Correspondent intimates that Mr. Wheeler's local popularity will carry many votes with him, and that there will be a general casting in of the modern "democracy" in that section of the State, or in the language of George Francis Train, Wheeler's letter will "rattle through the ranks of the democracy like lightning through a gooseberry bush."

There are other evidences of repudiation and desertion among the honest men of the opposition, in our own State. On Saturday last the little Mackerels of Milwaukee held a grand mass meeting, and in casting about for respectable men for officers, fell upon Sidney L. Root, who has acted with that party all his life. Mr. Root does not like the crowd and writes a letter to the News, denouncing the whole thing as reasonable. The following is his letter, and is plain enough for any one to understand.

EN. NEWS.—It appears from the published proceedings of the so-called democratic gathering of last Saturday evening, that I was announced as one of the Vice-Presidents. As I had no previous warning that such preference was in store for me, I had no opportunity to decline. It is now in my power to repudiate it.

If democracy means what it used to mean, devotion to the whole country, and an incessant purpose to crush out all resistance to the laws, and uphold the national unity and honor, by force and blood, if necessary, I am a democrat; but if such be the character of democracy, what party do they belong to, who, surrounded by rebels in arms, sue for peace, or armistice, or a convention to secure to rebels, what have been unable to conquer by force. When the rebels sue for peace, it will be time for the Government to consider it; but during the continuance of the rebellion, by force, or actual war, for the Government to entrust them to let us alone, would be a degree of abasement and cowardice, that would disgrace us forever; and for that reason, I cannot believe such a policy to be democratic. At all events, I do not wish to be the Vice-President, or President, of any Convention, called to sympathize or co-operate with treason.

SIDNEY L. ROOT.

Oct. 17th, 1864.

From the 37th Regiment.

Extract of a letter from Capt. D. A. Loeber of Co. A, 37th Wis. volunteers.

Near Petersburg, October 15.

DEAR FATHER:—While on picket duty on the right of my command on the 14th, four Johnnies came in, and delivered themselves up. They reported that their regiments would desert as soon as it could be done with safety. They stated that their line was very weak on our immediate vicinity. They appear to give up all hope of success. They were very hungry, and ate with great voracity our hard tack. One of them had three small turkeys in his haversack, and had been living on that article for the last three days.

Yesterday there was a private belonging to the second Maryland who attempted to desert but was overhauled, on searching him the entire plan of our works were found stowed away in his boot legs. He was tried, condemned and shot this morning. To-day there is quite an excitement in camp on account of the robbery of the brigade mail, having a large amount of money which was en route to the soldiers friends at home. The theft was traced to a man who acted in the capacity of cook in one of the companies, parts of letters were found on his person and after some threatening by our Colonel he confessed the whole thing, but little money has been recovered, but measures are being taken which it is hoped will be successful.

What are you doing in regard to the Presidential election? You can't have no idea of the intense anxiety there is on this subject in the army. A defeat at home while we are breasting the storm in the front would be anything but pleasant.

Put your shoulder to the wheel, and leave nothing undone that will assist in bringing about a Union victory. Should this great result be attained it will be welcomed by the army as the harbinger of peace, as the rebels can't stand victories in the front and the rear also. All the deserters with whom I have conversed, sing but one song, and that is the election of G. B. McClellan.

If we are defeated, we can up and at them again, but not so with the ballot-box. Your defeat will be irrevocable.

Letter from the 4th Battery.

The following letter has been handed us for publication.

Jones Landing, Va., Oct. 15th 1864.

Hon. David W. Noyes, Janesville, Wis.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of the 10th inst. is just received. You are doubtless very well informed of Dorman's safety, as he told me he wrote you the day after Friday's engagement. Owing to an unfortunate series of circumstances I did not arrive here until Sunday, two days after the fight.

The engagement was a very desperate one in which our division was completely overpowered by numbers. The results to this battery were serious only in the four guns lost and the great number of horses killed, forty-five; only a few men were lost, which I look upon as providential from their critical condition and situation. Every man in the battery fought like a hero, and not one of them deserted his post. The cavalry were completely routed early in the engagement and left the field entirely to the artillery. The battery fought entirely without support, and nobly held its position, kept up a constant fire, and did not cease firing until the enemy was within a few yards of them, being completely abandoned by the cavalry, and nearly surrounded by the enemy. When the General sent them orders twice to limber up and try to get away, they even then insisted upon having a "last shot," which they took before limbering up. The thing then was to get away. The rebels were close upon them, pouring in a furious fire of musketry, and the only road for getting away, which was not possessed by the enemy, was through a swamp. They succeeded in reaching this, but found that it was blockaded by the Regular Battery, and there was no way of getting through. However, they plunged into it, the horses mired down to their bellies and the guns to the axles. At the same time the enemy poured a volley into them killing nearly all the team horses. The General then gave orders to abandon everything and for each man to try and save himself. Not a man sought safety in flight before this.

The rebels were now among them, calling on them to surrender. Fortunately but few of them were taken prisoners and all managed to escape, save one, after getting through the swamp. Dorman soon collected them together and brought them up where the cavalry had taken refuge in an orderly manner. No company of men ever fought better or more obstinately; they fought the advancing enemy for some time alone and without support. The conduct of the cavalry in deserting them and making no effort to save them, and their guns was most cowardly. The praises of the battery are on nearly every tongue of those that participated in the engagement. Notwithstanding this, the engaging features of the fight, on the part of the cavalry, were so disgraceful, that we have to partake of it in the newspaper accounts. Hardly any of the accounts in the papers are correct as not a single correspondent was on the field and their reports were made up from flying rumors gained from frightened stragglers.

Dorman had a fearful responsibility upon him being the only officer with the battery, when there should have been four. I cannot sufficiently express to you my admiration of his conduct on this trying occasion. He distinguished himself by his gallantry and coolness. My men are in raptures over him and say that no man could have commanded them better. I am informed at headquarters that he managed the battery to their entire satisfaction and that his conduct was worthy of all praise. You cannot imagine what a great satisfaction it was for me to be told this, when I arrived here and heard that the battery had been lost. This General told me that he had not the slightest complaint to make against the battery, and he has already ordered new guns for us. A few days before the battle, Dorman was engaged with one section in sight of, and so near Richmond, that he fired into the city—the first time that it has been done since the war.

I have already recommended Dorman to the Governor for promotion for "gallantry in action." My time of service expired on the 10th. I shall have to leave here, or take the chance for staying two years longer. My situation is such that I cannot stay that length of time, and still I dislike very much to leave now. I have asked permission to remain until the 15th of November. In preference to any of my officers I hope that the Governor will give Dorman the commission that I leave vacant.

Very truly,
Geo. B. EASTLEY.

Sticks or goods and personal property have increased in value from two to three hundred per cent, since 1862. Have you increased your insurance in proportion?

It costs double to build now, over and above what it did in 1862. You may well ask, am I insured? and if so, am I in the companies that are able to stand up against the brokers that are just ahead? Look out for squalls about these days. Grant, Sherman & Co., are likely to injure the small fry. Dimock, at Insurance Headquarters, Lapping's block Janesville, Wis., has the sound Old Companies that have been through the wars before. You will have the same agent to deal with five years from now that you had five years ago, and that you have to-day. We say "when we lose."

Has Nothing Been Done?

The Hon. Henry O. Deming, of Connecticut, in his speech at the mass meeting in New York concluded with the following eloquent words:

"Nothing been done? Why, in the three years and a half we have done more than Julius Caesar with his ten years in Gaul; more than Hannibal with his seventeen years in Italy; more than the conqueror of British India with his fifteen years in that country. I challenge you to find in all history a single martial enterprise more conspicuous for the obstacles to be overcome, more numerous, more magnificent in its results, and more fatal to the enemy, than that of opening the Mississippi to the Gulf. Was nothing done at Sebastopol? Was nothing done at Antwerp? Was nothing done at Port Hudson? We have won more substantial triumphs at the expense of fewer comparative reverses, than in the memorable seven years which filled the world with the fame of Frederick the Great, or in the three-and-a-half years of the campaign of Napoleon the First, in Italy, from the time he descended the Alps like an avalanche on the plains of Lombardy.

"Nothing been done? Say, O Sherman, sweeping with thy besom the mountain fastnesses of Northern Georgia, gathering in thy toils all the arteries of rebel communication, and holding in thy palm the arsenal of the Confederacy, has nothing been done? Say, O Grant, clearing that blind war-path in the bloody Wilderness, at the bayonet's point, advancing the line from point to point, from the Rapidan to the James, and tightening the death coil around Richmond (applause), is the reason, 'nothing has been done,' a fitting one to send back to the still bleeding but victorious legions of Sheridan? (Applause.) Read that reproach if you dare, sons of New York—over the ashes of Corcoran and Wadsworth. Read it, sons of New Jersey, over the grave of the bright leader in the army—Philip Kearney. (Applause.) Read it, sons of Connecticut, over the tombs of Lyon and Sedgwick. (Applause.) Nothing done? Passing through the confounding fire of Forts Jackson and Philip, our naval armament on the Mississippi won a victory that pales not before Trafalgar. Under the concentrated fire of two forts and one battery they won another in Mobile Bay, which pales not before the Nile. Alas! alas! nothing has been done! Hear it, O Farragut, in the mantop of the Hartford. Tremendous and long-continued cheers, the audience rising and waving their hats."

President Davis' Visit to the Army in Georgia.

A correspondent of the Augusta (Ga.) Sentinel in a letter from the front, describing the recent visit of President Davis to the army, says:

"It is needless and can do no good to disguise the fact, that the President's reception was not an enthusiastic one. On the contrary, it was cold. There was no disinterested manifested, neither was there any enthusiasm—none of that general expression of personal admiration for 'the man' that characterized the visit made after the battle of Chickamauga. The reception this time was given to the 'President of the Confederate States.' As such no compliment can be made of it. And if any would have it otherwise, they must at all times remember that this army, as well as all the armies of the Confederacy, is made up of thinking men, and not machines, and govern themselves accordingly.

The time of the President was fully employed in interviews with the commanders-in-chief, the corps commanders, reviewing the troops, finally in a protracted meeting with all the generals in the army. From the outset it was palpable that great dissatisfaction prevailed, but ignorance of its cause was expressed. Delicacy, I suppose, sealed the mouths of the corps commanders. But the expression of the troops could not be mistaken. They did not attempt to hide their feelings; and so marked was the change in their conduct during the grand review as compared with that on a similar occasion last fall, that upon returning to headquarters the President insisted upon being informed as to the reason. Yet no one spoke out, and the consequence was a 'convocation of all the generals.'

My information is direct that at this meeting, from which General Hood very properly absented himself, a full interchange of views as to the condition of the army, its desires and feelings, took place. There was nothing concealed. The general wish for a change of commanders was made known, and by some it was positively urged that a change was necessary to save the army from disaster. There was no enmity displayed towards General Hood. At his own request, his personal qualities were admitted; but the naked truth that another would better serve to satisfy the wishes of the men, conciliate existing difficulties between officers, and inspire a greater confidence throughout the whole army, was bluntly avowed. The President was no longer in ignorance. At the same meeting preferences were expressed for a new commander, and Generals Johnson and Beauregard were the great favorites; the former, however, receiving by far the strongest expression in his favor.

DR. BELLON'S CALIFORNIA. Dr. Bellon, the president of the Sanitary mission arrived in Janesville from California on Sunday morning, and preached his congregation in the evening. Besides the regular attendants of the church, a large number of his other old friends were present. In the course of his sermon, which was impressive and touching in a high degree, Dr. Bellon gave an interesting account of the results of his mission to the Pacific coast. He said that he had preached twice every Sunday, delivered more than thirty addresses, opened and conducted a wide correspondence in California, Oregon, Nevada and Washington territory, and collected two hundred thousand dollars for the relief of our soldiers and sailors. He described the moral and social condition of California as most promising. His remarks were listened to with breathless interest throughout, and at the close of the services he was warmly greeted by his numerous parishioners and acquaintances.

Miscellaneous.

E. S. BARROWS has the pleasure of announcing the following list of

PARLOR COAL STOVES

for the trade of 1864-5, which comprise the leading

Stoves of the year:—

P. P. Stewart's Gas Burner.

MORNING GLORY,

LITTLEFIELD'S Parlor Furnaces,

EMPIRE GAS BURNER,

CHURCH'S GAS BURNER,

MORNING LIGHT,

SEAVEY'S GAS BURNER.

Also a choice collection of

CHEAP COAL STOVES!!

all of which will be found on exhibition at his store, and for which orders are solicited. Owing to a very great demand some of the above can only be furnished to order, and orders can only be filled in their turn.

Orders received for Littlefield's Furnaces, also Feary's

Furnaces for heating houses.

VERY IMPORTANT.

I have in stock a cheap and very effective Window

Blind Lock, by which the blind is securely fastened so that it cannot be opened from the outside.

See J. S. BARROWS.
